Design for Cultural Commons MA

A postgraduate course for pioneers in the field of cultural and urban commons

Design for Cultural Commons MA

You'll gain expertise through design shared values and assets, self governance, peer to peer economic models and working with government agencies to develop related policies. As a student you gain membership to the International Association for the Study of the Commons. This will enable you to gain awards, as well as access international collaboration opportunities and platforms for knowledge exchange following your MA.

On this MA you'll have access to renowned partnering industries and political institutions such as UN Habitat through its New Urban Agenda 2016 programme, Tate Modern's Tate Exchange programme, the Greater London Authority's London Curriculum and the Government Office for Science, advocating commons as part of Future of Cities research.

This unique course teaches you the discourse of commons, both historical and current. It teaches common practices in a live context.

You'll learn about public policies and how they are made, social theories and citizenship, micro economies, as well as a range of art and design teaching, from relational art, visual communication and performance to interiors, architecture and photography. You'll have the opportunity to tailor your learning by choosing from many subjects to construct your own unique curriculum.

In the UK, commons and co-production are referred to in government policies and tenders. They are currently being discussed in the EU parliament. On this course you will become an expert in executing best practice. Beyond teaching you to initiate your own commoning practice, you'll also learn how to raise funds and make your initiatives sustainable in the long-term.

We'll support you in applying for mentoring programmes following your MA, to develop your practice and initiative into a viable social enterprise.
